Clean Tech Market Services

Green Strategies Inc. and its President, Roger Ballentine, have been deeply involved in the energy and clean technologies marketplace for more than a decade. Having worked in the highest levels of government on clean technology policy; having advised some of the largest and most sophisticated corporate, industrial and financial players in the world; and having participated in transactional and governing roles for energy and clean technology companies, we provide best in class services to investors and other market players.

Capital Formation

We have extensive relationships with firms, funds, individuals and companies interested in deploying capital in the clean tech marketplace. We help capital-seeking clean tech companies connect with interested capital providers and help them present the strongest possible case for their business.

Deal Development

Through our corporate consulting work, our active involvement in clean tech business associations, our frequent speaking engagements, our participation in high-level policy development forums, and because we are nationally-known experts in the clean technology and clean energy space, we offer constant and valuable introductions to potential clean tech investment opportunities.

Deal Evaluation

Evaluating businesses and transactions in the clean energy and energy technology space can be difficult. Fuel and other commodity price volatility as well as extensive and constantly changing regulatory and other governmental policy frameworks make sophisticated due diligence critical. Our long experience in the sector and our unique insights in policymaking processes allows us to "see around the corner", helping investors and buyers evaluate the full potential risks and rewards of a proposed transaction.
